¶ TO THE GENTLE
Reader.

I Have thought it good, to insert a few Cautions, put forth by mee in my booke, for 1614. as things necessary for the good of all men, that shall haue neede of the Physition, or physickes helpe. I must confesse my selfe most vnable of many, yet for the good of the Kingdom and Countrey wherin I liue, I will so farre as I can lay open the ignorance of many leauid vnlearned persons, which doe daylie leaue their Callings & Trades where in they haue been trayned vp, and doe take vpon them the practice of Physicke & Chyrurgerie (with how little skill you may easily guesse) to the great hurt of health, and danger of lyfe to manie. But here I doe not alone condemne those ydle ignorant wandering want-wits before spoken of: but also I complaine mee of the ignorance and want

Reader.

I Have thought it good, to insert a few Cautions, put forth by mee in my booke, for 1614. as things necessary for the good of all men, that shall haue neede of the Physition, or physickes helpe. I must confesse my selfe most vnable of many, yet for the good of the Kingdom and Countrey wberin I liue, I will so farre as I can lay open the ignorance of many leaerd vnllearned persons, which doe daylie leaue their Callings & Trades, where in they haue been trayned vp, and doe take vpon them the practice of Physicke & Chyrurgerie (with how little skill you may easily guesse) to the great hurt of health, and danger of lyfe to manie. But here I doe not alone condemne those ydle ignorant wandering want-wits before spoken of: but also I complaine mee of the ignorance and want

The Epistle, to

of understanding of the Common people, which doe (as it were) runne headlong to their owne destruction, cleane contrarie to GODS appoyntment; who hath commanded vs in the time of sicknesse: First, to seeke vnto HIM, and next, vnto the Physition, as to the ordinarie meanes which hee hath appoynted: and not to the Carpenter, Cobler, Collyer, or such like, at whose bandes wee are rather to looke for hurt then helpe.

Ecclesiasticus sayeth: Honour the Physition, but not the Carpenter, Cobler, and such other. Yet notwithstanding euery man in his seuerall profession, is worthy of due prayse and commendation accordingly as his deserts shall be therein. And beere let mee acquainte thee with the knowledge and skill of most of these ignorant ill-conditioned Emperickes, which are meere shadowes without substance, that doe not deceyue thee of Money onely, but bereaue thee of thy health, and oftentimes of thy life also: (which in my opinion is farre to be respected aboue all other worldly things whatsoeuer)

the Reader.

For this is certaine in my owne knowledge, (besides the reporte of manie others made to me) that most of these before spoken of, haue but one drink or Hotch-potch, which they gine in general to all (those that are so much theyr owne enemyes as to make vse of them) how vnequall in age, how different in Complection or Constitution, or what seuerall griefes or sicknesses, soeuer they haue: therefore this Ile leave to the iudgement of euery vnderstanding man, what trust of helpe, or hope of health there is to be expected, at the hands of the afore-named (or such like blind and unskilful supposed Physicions) though skilfull make-shifts, as also how hard a matter it is for such ignoble, Mechanicall persons (as Taylors, Tynkers, or such like, to attaine the least measure of knowledge in naturall philolophy) without the which it is vnpossible for any man (though neuer so learned) to attaine vnto the true knowledge and Methodicall practise of Physicke: For, Vbi definit Philosophus, ibi incipit Medicus.
Likewise, Methodus est vita, ac spiritus Scientiarum, &c.

The Epistle, to

And here Gentle Reader, without offence, and for thy own good, let me aske thee two or three questions (and those are these) if thou hast a sute of Apparell to make, wilt thou go to the Comer? or a paire of shoes to make, to a Tayler, or a house to buyld, to eyther of them both, or such other? I dare say no, least thy apparell be spoyle, thy shoes ill made, and thy house ill buyld: yet notwithstanding, the health of thy bodie, the spoyle of thy limmes, nay, and the hazarding of thy life also: thou wilt not sticke to venture one, or all of these, in the bandes of the afore-named Taylors, Tinkers, Cobblers, Comers, or any others of the same kinde whatsoeuer: which for thy Money, will overthrow thy health spoyle thy bodie, and endanger thy life: what wouldst thou more? a word to the wise is sufficient.

Thus I, though the least of manie, yet in the greatnes of my loue (to my good Friends and Countreymen) I haue thought good the third time (seeing continuall cause offered) to shewe a few reasons to dissuade both men and women from putting their liues into the bandes of the afore named, witlesse, wandering

the Reader,

ring, ydle, ignorant, erring, Emperickes: For, Miserum est, Cum maius periculum a Medico, quam a Morbo impendet: It is a miserable thing when greater perill hangeth ouer the Patient from the Physition, then from the Disease. And further: it hath beene an olde saying (of what Antiquitie I know not, but how true, let the most vnderstanding, iudge:) That an ignorant Physicion is the most dangerous disease that can happen vnto anie man, whatsoeuer. GOD blesse my Friends from such. A. &c. Thus leauing my selfe to the Censure of the best Learned: I bid thee heartily fare-well.

Thine to the vtmost
of his best endeuors, Gre: Burton.

God saue the King and Prince, with all that loue them:
And confound the rest, and from the land remoue them,
